

Covid-19 Response

In the last several weeks Covid-19 has changed our lives and the world dramatically. As the Managing Director of Vie International, I wanted to provide you with an update on our business and to help you understand how the life insurance industry and Vie is positioned for strength in these uncertain times.

The life insurance industry has provided policyholders and beneficiaries with financial strength for over a century and has withstood world wars, pandemics and global recessions. Strong regulations with a conservative approach to investing has been the cornerstone for the industry for decades.

With life insurance companies factoring pandemic stress testing over the years into their businesses, we believe the industry is well positioned to weather this storm. In addition, the historic low interest rate environment and the economic downturn associated with the pandemic have created challenges for many industries, however this is one that I believe that the life insurance industry is well positioned to handle.

At Vie International, we have a commitment to our employees to work in a safe and secure environment. Our infrastructure and systems allow all of our staff to work remotely and we are available to provide our clients and our partners with the exceptional service that they have come to expect.

Please reach out to myself and any other member of the Vie International team if you have any questions or concerns.

Kind regards
